PASTORAL LETTER

Dear friends,

Welcome back after the summer break – and a good start to all of those who are moving on for new exciting life adventures, like going to university, going to a new school or starting a new chapter workwise or in any other way.

Leaving old and known things, places and people behind and starting something new is very exciting, but can be quite daunting, too. Also, actually, for those who stay behind. How is this new time in my life going to pan out? How are things going to be like? Will I cope, will I like it?

“One more step along the world I go...” – and we with them! Starting something new reminds us that life is all about development, transformation, even if we ourselves stay behind and go back to our routines and well-trodden paths.

“Teach me your way, O LORD, and I will walk in your truth; give me an undivided heart, that I may fear your name.” (Psalm 86,11)

Learning is at the heart of the Bible; at the heart of Judaism and at the heart of the Jesus movement. Learning God’s ways – whatever that may be, in any given situation. Knowing ourselves as Learners (= ”Disciples”).

And so, we will continue on our journey together, practicing “Holy Habits” alongside the early Christians – and hundreds of fellow Christians (mainly in UK) who have embarked on the same journey with their churches.

The coming 2 months we will face the first disciples’ practice of “Sharing Resources” – which may raise some interesting questions for ourselves and our communal living.

We will then have a little break in November, reflecting on the Habits we’ve learned and practiced so far, and will live the Advent and Christmas season for what it is. In January we will start our second year with Holy Habits, beginning with the habit of “Making new disciples”, followed by “Worship”, “Breaking bread”, “Serving” and, last but not least, “Fellowship”.

“Teach me your way, O LORD, and I will walk in your truth; give me an undivided heart, that I may fear your name.” (Psalm 86,11)

Yours in Christ,

Ulrike

SHARING RESOURCES

We are now moving onto the fifth of our Holy Habits topics and here is the introduction from the booklet:

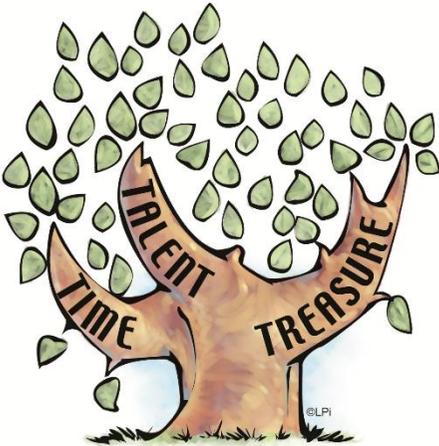

“In Acts 2:44-45 and 4:32-37, Luke presents pictures of the early Christian communities of disciples supporting one another and those in need in the wider community by the generous sharing of their resources. They shared and sold possessions to create a common fund which could be used to support those in need of income or resources. The fund may also have supported the apostles and, later on, the deacons and others. It was a powerfully prophetic, counter-cultural expression of community then. It remains so today. Much of 21st-century Western culture encourages us to live separate, independent lives protecting our individuality, our privacy and our belongings. The same attitude is also becoming more prominent within the politics of nation states.

In Acts 2:44 we hear that the disciples were together and had ‘all things in common’. As you explore this habit of Sharing Resources, you may like to reflect on what having all things in common meant to those early Christians, and how we relate that to our lives today personally and collectively in holy living.

This is a particularly challenging habit. It is not about offering others what you can spare. Nor is it about taking from others what you fancy. To share something requires us to change our relationship with that item, perhaps relinquishing our power over it, or taking more account of how we use it. Sharing roles or gifts may mean accepting that a task is not completed to your own exacted standard. Sharing ideas or thoughts may make you vulnerable. True sharing is about working together in an open, honest and thoughtful manner without any hidden agendas. Sharing can be costly and demanding but it is a way to life-giving and transformational experience.”

REFLECTION: Sharing Resources

Our next Holy Habit is “sharing resources”. We are told in Acts Chapter 2 that the first believers had everything in common, and that they would sell land or property from time to time and offer the proceeds to anyone in the group who had need. This is radically different from the world’s way of doing things, both then and now. Down the centuries, monasteries would emulate this, but most of us in contemporary churches would not go that far.

We see a more detailed description of this in Acts 4:32-37, but we also see this go spectacularly wrong in chapter 5 (Ananias and Sapphira).

I suspect that the early Christians shared resources partly in expectation of the imminent second coming of Jesus and partly because of the strong sense of unity and friendship they had within the group. As the numbers in the group increased so rapidly, it would have been more difficult to sustain.

However, it is still beneficial to think about what we can share with one another. After all, everything we have is a gift from God, and so we can honour Him by sharing, but only if we do it voluntarily, by faith, and not out of a sense of duty.

MOVING STORIES

‘Rebuild my House’

House Demolitions in by Israeli forces continue unabated in the West Bank. mostly in the name of security.

On Monday, July 22, 2019, the Israeli authorities demolished buildings in the Wadi al-Humos, the eastern extension of Zur Baher in East Jerusalem.

The move came after the Israeli Supreme Court rejected the residents’ appeal and ruled there was no legal barrier to the demolitions. Israel said it would demolish up to 13 buildings, including 14 apartments, the vast majority of which are in various stages of construction.

The buildings were home to two families including 17 people, of which 11 are minors. Some of them were built in Area A, with building permits issued by the Palestinian Authority, which holds planning powers in those areas. Wadi al-Humos is outside of Jerusalem’s municipal boundary and constitutes the main land reserve for the development of Zur Baher.

The Zur Baher committee estimates that 6,000 people currently live in that neighborhood – a quarter of the total population of Zur Baher.

These actions are seen by many as more evidence of the impunity displayed by Israel as an occupying force rather than a state that treats all its citizens equally. A video showing the destruction can be viewed here.

GAZA: A Film Review

GAZA is a masterfully crafted portrait of Palestinian life, offering a rare chance to be immersed in the heart of this tiny strip of land.

The film succeeds in showing the lives of ordinary people who courageously keep going in the grimmest of conditions, in a world where, as someone puts it, there is a “wall between the people of Gaza and life itself.”

We see a young woman practising the cello, a young man recording rap tracks, a theatre director rehearsing a performance piece, and a fisherman brooding over the dire conditions of his business – he may not fish more than three miles out, leading to a pitifully meagre catch.

The sea is the one border that ought not to be overwhelming for the people of Gaza, but is almost as unforgiving as the Israeli border crossings. This is a sober and even angry film about a people living under a brutal political occupation.

GAZA was released in the UK on the 9th of August 2019.

ST JAMES' NEWS

CHURCH MEETING NOTES

JULY 2019

Our July Church Meeting was chaired by Margaret Minoletti and was attended by thirteen people. Before the meeting began, we stood in memory of Kathleen Kennedy, who had died on 16th July, almost 99 years old. News of the church family was exchanged before moving on to other matters.

The saga of the Russell Road fence continues, as the new fence which has been erected is not consistent with the position of the previous one. There is a gap between the entrance to the Hall Manager's flat and the new fence which needs to be filled in at the church's expense, so the £500 which was to have been offered as goodwill gesture to the owner of the fence will no longer be given. The re-decoration of the Church Room will take place in early August and a carpet has been donated for use in that room. The Hall Manager's flat is in urgent need of re-decoration as well, and the stair carpet leading up to the flat has to be replaced soon. Other non-urgent re-decoration of the church premises will take place at later date, when finances permit. A new advertising board, in the form of a sandwich board with interchangeable panels, has been purchased to advertise church events. It will be placed at the end of the church drive near the roadside notice board.

There is a problem with people using the church car park without permission, so some form of barrier will be used to stop this, and only people using the church premises or those paying to park will be allowed to enter.

A recent Churches Together meeting at St. James' had gone well, although only representatives from our church and the Baptist church attended. News of the two churches was exchanged and ideas for working together were put forward. The next meeting will be held at the Baptist church on 4th November.

Another Film Night is to be held at St. James' on 17th August at 6:30pm when Pollyanna will be shown. The new roadside notice board will be used to advertise the event and it is hoped a good number of people will attend. Entrance is free, although donations are welcome, to comply with licensing regulations.

A Prayer/ Listening Time on Fridays in the Church Room between 1.00-2.00pm will begin on 23rd August, after a training session for volunteers on 16th August. A rota of those willing to help will be compiled. The new advertising board will be used to publicise it and possibly cards giving details of it will be made available.

As summer comes to an end we begin to look forward to autumn when we have another film Evening on 14th September, our Harvest Festival on 15th September, with gifts being given to Epping Forest Food Bank and one more Garden Afternoon on 29th September.

So we will continue to pray and ask God to be with us in all our planning, so we can fulfil our mission here in Buckhurst Hill- To know Christ and make Him known.

OTHONA BRADWELL

August 2019

Thinking Globally, Acting Locally was the theme of the week I signed up for at Othona, Bradwell-on-Sea this summer. It was led by Malcolm Hardy, a Trustee of Essex Wildlife Trust and a biology teacher at a sixth form college in Hackney. He is a wildlife enthusiast and a keen conservationist.

The week was split between talks about wildlife, excursions and practical activities. On the first day we had a guided walk around the environs of Othona, looking at the reed beds where waste water is filtered and looking at the habitat of the Shrill Carder Bumblebee, which is the rarest bumblebee in the UK. In the evening we had a talk on the birds and insects of Othona which was very informative.

The next day some of us began making bird and bat boxes and I attempted making a bug hotel with some difficulty! In the evening we had a talk on the Marine Environment around Bradwell, which may be affected, if plans for a new nuclear power station there go ahead.

The following evening Tim Sapsford, from Essex Bat Group, came to talk to us about bats and then took us on a bat walk which was exciting. We heard lots of bats flying overhead near the car park and in a woodland area. They made quite a loud rattling noise and flew so quickly I only saw one, I think. Most of them were pipistrelles, although there are ten species of bats in Essex.

Our final excursion, the next day, was down to the seashore where we identified plants which can live in that salty environment and checked the different types of seashells on the beach. We also looked for male and female shore crabs under rocks and found lots of them! I learned so much about wildlife in that week and how we must care for the environment.

One of the things I enjoy most about being at Othona is going to St. Peter's Chapel twice a day to attend the services led by different people. There is no electricity in the chapel, so in the evening it is lit by candles, and walking there in the evening, watching the sun set with a panorama of sea and sky all around is amazing. Inside the chapel, founded by St. Cedd in 654AD, there is a beautiful crucifix designed by Francis William Stephens, installed there over sixty years ago and St. Cedd is depicted at the foot of it, holding his bishop's crook. Three stones are set into the altar, one from Lindisfarne, where St. Cedd was trained as a monk, one from Iona where St. Columba founded a monastery and where the Celtic mission of St. Cedd began. The third stone is from Lastingham, where St. Cedd died of the plague in 664AD.

It is over seventy years now since Revd. Norman Motley set up the Othona Community, hoping to promote reconciliation between German and British people after the Second World War. He encountered considerable opposition and derision, but he was a very determined person and his vision bore fruit with many German people still coming to spend time at Bradwell each year along with people from many other countries. While I was there there were seven VAPS (Volunteer Action for Peace) students from France, Spain, Italy and Mexico who helped out with various tasks during their two week stay. They all got on very well together, considering they had never seen each other before. Another of the good things about being at Othona is seeing old friends and making new ones, meeting a diverse mix of people, old and young, able and disabled and gifted in different ways. If you have never been to stay there, or even to visit for a day, I would recommend it. You could check the website: www.othona-bradwell.org.uk to find out more about the community and its programme of events.

SLOW BREAD

"What shall I compare the kingdom of God to?" It is like yeast that a woman took and mixed into a large amount of flour until it worked all through the dough' Luke 13:20-21

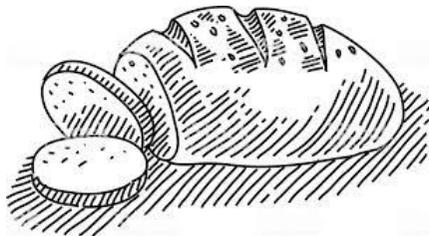

I've been experimenting with baking bread for over 7 years now and found that there is one magic ingredient that you won't find in any recipe book: time. The essential ingredients of bread are flour, water, salt and yeast although there are many forms of unleavened bread which do not include yeast. Many recipes include some form of oil or butter but you can make good bread without that.

To make tasty bread I've found that although the ingredients do matter I've not been able to tell much difference between any of the available white bread flours. And I admit to having used flour over a year beyond its 'best before' date without any harm! So freshness isn't an issue either.

What can make a big difference though is the speed at which you make bread. Leaving time to let the bread both rise and prove is key. Proving is just the final rise of the bread after it's in the shape (roll or loaf) you'll use for baking. You can develop a nice tangy taste by rising and knocking back the dough several times. All of this is because of the action of yeast, a little microorganism that you can buy in a tin. It's a living thing and as it grows and develops in bread dough it produces carbon dioxide, which makes it rise, and lots of flavour. Yeast is tough and will grow even in your fridge.

I often start making bread on Friday evening, knead it and then put it into the fridge overnight. It's exciting in the morning to see how much it's risen and there's plenty of time to knock it back and let it prove. You can discover so many things by working with yeast and some simple ingredients!
